Butler finishes 21st at ORP

Rick Ware Racing's Brett Butler continued his climb up the ladder in points at O'Reilly Raceway Park this past weekend. Butler piloted the #47 Fuel Doctor USA Chevy through the heat during another hot, Midwest week of racing.

Brett qualified the Fuel Doctor Chevy in the 33rd position and was patient in moving towards the front.

“The key to short track racing is being patient and knowing when to make a move. We did just that tonight and ended up with a great points day for RWR!”

Bulter’s strategy worked well as he picked up six positions on the first pit stop and continued to pass trucks and avoid wrecks to bring home a solid 21st place finish as well as claiming the award for improving the most positions in a race.

“We were not great but we were good today. We are steadily progressing and I feel that this young team is going places. We just need to continue to improve and I think we can contend soon for top tens and victory lane,” stated Butler.

Brett will now look towards Pocono Raceway for the running of the Pocono Mountains 125 on Saturday, July 31st.
