Butler ready to take on the Monster

Brett Butler, driver of the #47 Fuel Doctor Chevy, is ready to take on the Monster. Butler will visit perhaps the toughest track on the NASCAR Camping World Truck Series schedule, Friday for the running of the Dover 200 at Dover International Speedway.

"This place is so tough, and honestly, I am pumped to get it at," stated Butler.

The Georgia native has several reasons to get excited about a track that many fear. "We were so strong at Kansas and had a shot at a Top 10 but got caught up with a lap truck that ruined the day. The guys back at RWR (Rick Ware Racing) gave me such a good piece there and have worked around the clock to do the same for Dover!" Brett proclaimed.

This will be the race for Butler at Dover and he has seen enough to know that this track is truly a "Monster!"

"The speeds are so fast here with all the banking and there is little room for error. Even if it's not your fault, the track closes up so fast that many times you're into the wreck before you can slow down. The track eats competitors up!"

Brett will be guiding the Fuel Doctor USA Chevy around the track with veteran team mate Donnie Neuenberger's help.

"Donnie has been here a ton and has always given me such great advice at these tracks that I haven't been to. This is Donnie's stomping ground and I think both of us will give RWR another great run together!"

Action begins for the Dover 200 with practice on Thursday at 2:30. Qualifying will be on Friday at 10:10am EST on SPEED with the race starting at 4:45pm.
